PART 3

HAZEL: Tom, could I ask you for some advice, please?

TOM: Yes of course, if you think I can help. What's it about?

HAZEL: It's my first media studies assignment, and I'm not sure how to go about it. You must have done it last year.

TOM: Is that the one comparing the coverage of a particular story in a range of newspapers?

HAZEL: That's right.

TOM: Oh yes, I really enjoyed writing it.

HAZEL: So what sort of things do I need to compare?

TOM: Well, there are several things. For example, there's the question of which page of Q21 the newspaper the item appears on.

Audioscripts

114351	Vou man because there's a hig difference between having it on the front nage
HAZEL:	You mean, because there's a big difference between having it on the front page and the bottom of page ten, for instance?
TOM:	Exactly. And that shows how important the editor thinks the story is. Then there's the size - how many column inches the story is given, how many columns it	Q22 spreads over.
HAZEL:	And I suppose that includes the headline.
TOM:	It certainly does. It's all part of attracting the reader's attention.	Q23
HAZEL: TOM:	What about graphics – whether there's anything visual in addition to the text? Yes, you need to consider those, too, because they can have a big effect on the	QZ3
I OIVI.	reader's understanding of the story – sometimes a bigger effect than the text itself. Then you'll need to look at how the item is put together: what structure is	Q24 it given? Bear in mind that not many people read beyond the first paragraph, so what has the journalist put at the beginning? And if, say, there are conflicting opinions about something, does one appear near the end, where people probably won't read it?
HAZEL:	And newspapers sometimes give wrong or misleading information, don't they?  Either deliberately or by accident. Should I be looking at that, too?
TOM:	Yes, if you can. Compare what's in different versions, and as far as possible, try and work out what's true and what isn't. And that relates to a very important point: what's the writer's purpose , or at least the most important one, if they have	Q25 several. It may seem to be to inform the public, but often it's that they want to create fear, or controversy, or to make somebody look ridiculous.	000
HAZEL:	Gosh, I see what you mean. And I suppose the writer may make assumptions	Q26
TOM:	about the reader.  That's right – about their knowledge of the subject, their attitudes, and their level
TOWI.	of education, which means writing so that the readers understand without feeling patronised. All of that will make a difference to how the story is presented.
HAZEL:	Does it matter what type of story I write about?
TOM:	No – national or international politics, the arts Anything, as long as it's covered in two or three newspapers. Though of course it'll be easier and more fun if it's something you're interested in and know something about.	007
HAZEL:	And on that basis a national news item would be worth analysing – I'm quite	Q27 keen on politics, so I'll try and find a suitable topic. What did you choose for your TOM:	analysis, Tom?
том:	analysis, Tom? I was interested in how newspapers express their opinions explicitly, so	Q28
том:	analysis, Tom?	Q28
TOM:	analysis, Tom? I was interested in how newspapers express their opinions explicitly, so I wanted to compare editorials in different papers, but when I started looking, I couldn't find two on the same topic that I felt like analysing. In that case, I won't even bother to look.	Q28
	analysis, Tom?  I was interested in how newspapers express their opinions explicitly, so  Lwanted to compare editorials in different papers, but when I started looking, I couldn't find two on the same topic that I felt like analysing.  In that case, Lwon't even bother to look.  So in the end I chose a human interest story – a terribly emotional story about a	Q28
HAZEL:	analysis, Tom? I was interested in how newspapers express their opinions explicitly, so I wanted to compare editorials in different papers, but when I started looking, I couldn't find two on the same topic that I felt like analysing. In that case, I won't even bother to look. So in the end I chose a human interest story – a terribly emotional story about a young girl who was very ill, and lots of other people – mostly strangers – raised	Q28
HAZEL:	analysis, Tom?  I was interested in how newspapers express their opinions explicitly, so  I wanted to compare editorials in different papers, but when I started looking, I couldn't find two on the same topic that I felt like analysing.  In that case, I won't even bother to look.  So in the end I chose a human interest story – a terribly emotional story about a young girl who was very ill, and lots of other people – mostly strangers – raised money so she could go abroad for treatment. Actually, I was surprised – some	Q28
HAZEL:	analysis, Tom?  I was interested in how newspapers express their opinions explicitly, so  I wanted to compare editorials in different papers, but when I started looking, I couldn't find two on the same topic that I felt like analysing.  In that case, I won't even bother to look.  So in the end I chose a human interest story – a terribly emotional story about a young girl who was very ill, and lots of other people – mostly strangers – raised money so she could go abroad for treatment. Actually, I was surprised – some papers just wrote about how wonderful everyone was, but others considered the	Q28
HAZEL:	analysis, Tom?  I was interested in how newspapers express their opinions explicitly, so  Lwanted to compare editorials in different papers, but when I started looking, I couldn't find two on the same topic that I felt like analysing.  In that case, Lwon't even bother to look.  So in the end I chose a human interest story – a terribly emotional story about a young girl who was very ill, and lots of other people – mostly strangers – raised money so she could go abroad for treatment. Actually, I was surprised – some papers just wrote about how wonderful everyone was, but others considered the broader picture, like why treatment wasn't available here.	Q28 Q29
HAZEL: TOM:	analysis, Tom?  I was interested in how newspapers express their opinions explicitly, so  I wanted to compare editorials in different papers, but when I started looking, I couldn't find two on the same topic that I felt like analysing.  In that case, I won't even bother to look.  So in the end I chose a human interest story – a terribly emotional story about a young girl who was very ill, and lots of other people – mostly strangers – raised money so she could go abroad for treatment. Actually, I was surprised – some papers just wrote about how wonderful everyone was, but others considered the
HAZEL: TOM:	I was interested in how newspapers express their opinions explicitly, so I wanted to compare editorials in different papers, but when I started looking, I couldn't find two on the same topic that I felt like analysing.  In that case, I won't even bother to look.  So in the end I chose a human interest story – a terribly emotional story about a young girl who was very ill, and lots of other people – mostly strangers – raised money so she could go abroad for treatment. Actually, I was surprised – some papers just wrote about how wonderful everyone was, but others considered the broader picture, like why treatment wasn't available here.  Hmm, Lusually find stories like that raise quite strong feelings in me! I'll avoid that. Perhaps I'll choose an arts topic, like different reviews of a film, or something about funding for the arts – I'll think about that.	Q29
HAZEL: TOM: HAZEL: TOM:	I was interested in how newspapers express their opinions explicitly, so I wanted to compare editorials in different papers, but when I started looking, I couldn't find two on the same topic that I felt like analysing.  In that case, I won't even bother to look.  So in the end I chose a human interest story – a terribly emotional story about a young girl who was very ill, and lots of other people – mostly strangers – raised money so she could go abroad for treatment. Actually, I was surprised – some papers just wrote about how wonderful everyone was, but others considered the broader picture, like why treatment wasn't available here.  Hmm, Lusually find stories like that raise quite strong feelings in me! I'll avoid that. Perhaps I'll choose an arts topic, like different reviews of a film, or something about funding for the arts – I'll think about that.  Yes, that might be interesting.	Q29
HAZEL: TOM: HAZEL:	I was interested in how newspapers express their opinions explicitly, so I wanted to compare editorials in different papers, but when I started looking, I couldn't find two on the same topic that I felt like analysing.  In that case, I won't even bother to look.  So in the end I chose a human interest story – a terribly emotional story about a young girl who was very ill, and lots of other people – mostly strangers – raised money so she could go abroad for treatment. Actually, I was surprised – some papers just wrote about how wonderful everyone was, but others considered the broader picture, like why treatment wasn't available here.  Hmm, Lusually find stories like that raise quite strong feelings in me! I'll avoid that. Perhaps I'll choose an arts topic, like different reviews of a film, or something about funding for the arts – I'll think about that.	Q29